Marc Brown – Division 2 Minor Championship Final

Marc is a dual referee and a member of na gCeithre Maistiri, Donegal Town. After taking up the whistle in 2013 Marc has had the privilege to be man in the middle for U21 A (2019), Senior B (2018), Intermediate B (2017), Junior B (2016), Junior A (2021) and Junior Hurling (2022). In underage Marc has refereed all underage finals in both football and hurling, including last year's Minor A final.

Married to Geraldine and dad to Shay, Lucy and Fynn, Marc would like to thank them for their love and support over the last few years. A word of thanks also to Michelle Bennett, Lee Jordan, Pat Walsh, Shane Toolan and whoever else helped Marc out in his refereeing career to date. Finally to both teams and management the very best of luck in today's game which Marc is sure will be great final and players will do their club and families proud.

And remember "tough times don't last, tough people do"...

TO THE BEST OF MY ABILITY.

Time for Collective Responsibility, if not us, then who? If not now, when?

Le Cian Murphy, Ball de chuid (CLG), Theach Mealóg-Sraid Síngé

The plethora of great games that are cramming the club calendar are being overshadowed by the reputational damage caused by a mindless minority engaged in behaviour that tarnishes the Association. In the past it has been acts of on field indiscipline amongst players that has dragged us through the mud. But 2022 has taken a turn for the worse with this behaviour extending to allegations of attacks on match officials. Do we really need to wait for a draconian set of laws and penalties to be issued by the GAA at national and local level to bring about an urgent stop?

Surely, we already know as individuals what needs to happen? There is a collective responsibility to establish what we consider an acceptable norm in relation to respect on the field and respect in dealing with match officials. The very fact that we put up signs on club pitches reminding parents "This isn't an All-Ireland final" and seeking good behaviour – and the very fact that we have an initiative like the "silent sideline" at juvenile matches should be taken as a less than positive indication of where we are. We can't expect signs and silent sidelines to be a cure when there is a cultural issue that needs to be tackled.

For too long we have tolerated an approach to discipline in the GAA to look for the grey area interpretation of rules and suspensions to see if they can be got around. We erode and undermine our values every time we go into a committee room and look to pull a stroke to get a player off or a suspension reduced, or a charge challenged. And even if these successful appeals are a 'legitimate' use of the system and sometimes succeed having highlighted procedural or technical errors – is there not a moral authority and obligation to do what is right, to hold your hands up when you are in the wrong and accept your punishment?

At matches we can encourage a forward who misses an open goal to think about the next ball or support a defender or goalie who makes a howler and costs a score. But at the same time, we have an insistence on referee infallibility and are outraged when it fails to materialise. This does not stand up to scrutiny. Likewise, there is nothing brave about hiding behind the anonymity of a keyboard to vent. The abdication of this moral code has brought us to the point where we are now – in the public domain because of an apparent lawlessness.

We know this isn't us. This is not what we stand for or want to be about. So, what are we prepared to do about it? Because if it is something we need to have enforced on us by officialdom then it won't work. If it is forced on us by a referee strike it won't work. Later this month the GAA will unveil a major referee recruitment and retention initiative led by Uachtarán Larry McCarthy. It will among other things champion a revival of the Give Respect, Get Respect initiative and is part of the Association's strategic commitment to raising the status of refereeing within Gaelic games. Refereeing will always be a special calling, not for everyone but something that is hugely rewarding for those who answer a call that the games cannot function without.

Recent allegations of attacks on match officials have already provoked a debate around the current strength of the penalties that exist in our rulebook and the need for perhaps greater deterrents. But arguably the biggest change that is required is one of mindset not rules. We can start by seeing referees not as some necessary evil but as GAA members like the rest of us, making the invaluable contribution to our games that they are. Clubs should highlight and promote and celebrate the people from their own ranks who are putting their hands up and are acting as match officials.

We need to better educate coaches, parents and players about our rules and also about our attitude to discipline - and when those lines are crossed the response should be swift and decisive and make victims of indiscipline, be they players or referees, feel protected, supported and vindicated. An inconvenient truth is we need to call out our own for their bad behaviour directed at match officials whether on or off the field. We should not turn a blind eye to our own people when they set a bad example through their behaviour.

We can insist that people reported for verbal abuse of match officials are made complete referee courses as part of their rehabilitation. There is a rule in place for a referee to move a ball forward in response to back chat from a player. But perhaps we should set the tone at underage level and respond to back chat to a referee by awarding a 20 metre free against the offending team instead. And when we find ourselves facing accusations of poor discipline we need more people to have the courage to take the John Mullane line that "if you do the crime, you do the time." New rules can be made, existing rules can be tightened but the business world will tell you that culture eats strategy for breakfast. Society is angrier now and social media can be a place where anger is easily stoked and rarely moderated.

But there is still a choice. What sort of GAA culture do we want to exist? It starts with individuals. It starts with us as GAA members. If not us, who? If not now, when?

Supporting from the Sideline

Already in this programme abuse of our officials has been highlighted and too often it is also the case players, particularly our youngsters, are also subject to abuse. In the words of some young players “when parents, shout roar and curse us, expect us to play like we were born to it, have been playing for years or are competing in Croke Park, that’s not fair. We all mess up sometimes and we know we have made mistakes and you screaming at us does not help”. Ideally, clubs, managers, coaches, family and fans are there to support our young players, girls and boys, hurlers, footballers and camogie players.

With that in mind CLG Dhún na nGall Children’s Officer Daireen McMenamin and Bradas Video Productions have produced a series of videos with the message “Respect One, Respect All”. These videos are uploaded to the County Board’s YouTube channel and the Donegal GAA website. Daireen would like to thank Paddy McMenamin, Bradas O’Donnell, the County hurlers and footballers who participated, referees Enda McFeely and Siobhan Coyle, coaches, parents and of course the children who participated. Take the message on board, be patient and support, don’t abuse.

SUSPECTED HEAD INJURY

- Concussion is a brain injury that can be caused by an impact to a player's head or body
- Over 90% of concussions occur without a loss of consciousness, therefore recognition of other signs and symptoms is crucial

"IT'S NOT ALWAYS A KNOCK-OUT"

OBSERVATION

INITIAL SIGNS:

The nature of the impact:

- The speed of the impact / collision
- Was the player braced for impact? (Did they see the impact coming)
- Was there any rotational (twisting) motion of the head / neck caused by the impact?

INDICATORS:

Player's reaction:

- Did they lie motionless for any period of time?
- Were they unsteady on their feet?
- Did they clutch their head?

RED FLAGS:

Urgent medical attention:

- Possible neck or spinal injury –player should not be moved
- Prolonged Loss of consciousness
- Deteriorating conscious state
- Convulsions / Seizures
- Vomiting
- Double Vision
- Disorientation/Confusion
- Severe or increasing headache
- Abnormalities of balance or coordination
- Slurred or incoherent speech
- Weakness or tingling/burning in arms or legs

A SIMPLE TWO-STEP PROCESS SHOULD BE APPLIED:

1. RECOGNISE -

the signs and symptoms

2. REMOVE -

the player from the field of play

Remember,

if there is any suspicion of concussion, the player should be removed from the field of play:
